I don't know where I stand on the football championship XXXX-VII. (We can't say the 'bowl' word or the 'super' word put together, or the NFL will send a maximum blitz thru our office.) Part of me was pulling for the San Francisco Ravens and another part supported the Baltimore 49ers. Admittedly, the sum total of both parts is less than 10%. I was there for the beer and the commercials. I watched the big game at The No-Frills Bar and Grill in Ft. Worth and the people were having a great time. The beer was $3 a bottle and the chicken quesadillas were tasty.

I went around from table to table asking folks what their favorite commercial was. Everyone got to vote and several people voted more than once - they were democrats. The hands down favorite was the Taco Bell partying old people commercial - it even got a cheer from the bar crowd and not all of them were old or drunk. I almost expected the old geezers to get busted for drunk and disorderly - it was that convincing. Another popular favorite was the Doritos ad featuring a goat. It is just so hard to find a well trained goat these days so you have to give the creators extra credit points for casting.

The Bud lite Voodoo commercial had the hottest babe in it - no I'm not talking about Stevie Wonder. The Calvin Klein underwear commercial scored big with the ladies, but they wanted to see more, or at least get the male model's phone number. Go Daddy, the m&ms and Doritos with the little girl get honorable mention. The lamest commercials were by the NFL (of course) and Cars.com, Ford motors, e-trade and the Church of Scientology. I have nothing against scientists, but I don't think they have earned deity status or religion denomination status, but heck, anyone with 4 million dollars can buy a 30-second ad. Sonic drive-in had a pretty lame ad also, but that is their trademark - lame ads. Although some of you may say their trademark is foot-long coney dogs. I think I agree. Even when piled high with chili and onions, their coney's are easier to stomach than their commercials.

The half time show was "OK". Maybe a little better than OK. I kept hoping Justin Timberlake would jump up on stage and rip off Beyonce's costume, but he was barred for life from attending the game. Too bad. The show started so promising, with a shot looking up Beyonce's skirt, but then she started moving around and I dislocated an eyeball trying to follow that mystic triangle below her naval. The guitarist set her 'axe' on fire, but kept on playing. It was a miracle she didn't set her purple Afro on fire. Was Beyonce lip-syncing? I don't know. I always fantasize about her lips doing other things besides singing.

Someone said, the blackout just after the halftime show was because "Beyonce s__ked all the juice out of the stadium". Hey, if it wasn't true, we couldn't print it. There may be something to this, either that or the stadium was powered by the same lithium batteries running the Boeing 787. The blackout caused 34 minutes of essentially dead-air. Even the worst commercials would have been more entertaining than watching the TV clowns - I mean sports analysis talk about things you already saw. I did notice, as soon as the lights went out, half of the San Francisco team went to sleep. The other half had gone to sleep during the first half. SF did wake-up after their nap and made a game of it. Too bad they spotted the Ravens a 109 yard touchdown run.

Adventures in the Erotic Underground™ With The Not So Desperate Housewife

Hey kids, it's me Mardi, "The Not So Desperate Housewife", mulling over Mardi Gras and the benefits of bartering. Yes, Mardi Gras is one of those few things (along with Burn's Night and those riotous Super Bowl parties) that help us survive the long, cold, dreary dead-time between New Year's Eve and St. Patrick's Day which, for me, officially marks the arrival of spring. Thankfully, this year's Mardi Gras comes early in the cycle; it can actually fall on any given Tuesday between February 3rd and March 9th.

So, why is the date for Mardi Gras so hard to pin down? Well, as you know, the Carnival season starts on the Twelfth Night of the Feast of Epiphany and continues until the day before Ash Wednesday which occurs forty-six days before Easter which is always the first Sunday after a full moon following the Spring Equinox, of course! Confusing? Yes. Perhaps a better method for determining whether the Carnival season has started is just to wear brightly colored beads starting sometime in January and the first time some hot young thing raises her shirt and shouts "Throw me something mister!" you'll know the big day has arrived.

All this brings me to the point, or points, of this week's discussion which has more to do with the now time-honored tradition of flashing for beads than the complex calculations of dates for pagan holidays co-opted for contemporary religious purposes. So, you might ask, what's the deal with the tempting titillation of this particularly brazen brand of barter? How did it all get started? The truth is no one really knows. The best answer I have heard is that when parade floats were banned from the French Quarter back in the early seventies, the convivial creativity that so often accompanies unbridled inebriation resulted in revelers coming up with a little parade ritual of their own as balcony-borne barterers offered up beads to those below who put on the best show. And what would catch the attentions of those high-perched tossers better than boobs?

For a dedicated exhibitionist such as myself, these infrequent flashers remind me of the reaction many dedicated drinkers have to New Year's Eve as Mardi Gras madness seems a little like amateur night for those who brazenly bare but once a year. Oh well, anything that liberates one to feel the thrill of a little fantasy flashing is surely a worthy endeavor. So, here a few tips for those who would see and those who would be seen:

Give room – nothing worse than a pack of salivating dogs crowding around your favorite flasher to not only spoil the show, but the mood as well.

Look but don't touch – showing is not an invitation for unwanted touching which risks not only a punch in the face, and possibly a trip downtown, but will cause those with caution to quit showing altogether. Do yourself and everyone else a favor, don't grab or tolerate those who do. Don't cheapen the currency – girls, flashing a world-class pair for a sorry strand doesn't do you justice. But don't think that the briefest peek at your glorious assets are automatically going to get you that giant string of battery-powered beads that are already doing a little flashing of their own. Experienced bead traders call those "bush beads" and I'll leave it to your imagination as to why. Be mindful of your audience – it's not hard to figure out that there are people and places for whom and where even the most amazing pair might be inappropriate. Save us all the unwanted attention and save the flashing for an appreciative, adult audience.

Have fun – remember, those beads aren't really worth that much except for the good-natured bartering they inspire. Be respectful of those showing and those throwing and everyone will have a good time.

Of course the best way to enjoy Mardi Gras is with other like-minded kinksters in your favorite haunts in the erotic underground where:

The Velvet Curtain will be having their "Naughty Gras Party" this weekend with plenty of beads and "gold" coins for bartering with your favorite flashers. Colette will hold a Masquerade ball reminiscent of the Venetian Carnivale celebrations of old. Cocktail dress suggested with accents of green and gold. Remember, masks are mandatory (but they have some if you forget) After Midnight will be doing it "Nawlin's style" with plenty of what you would expect from the Big Easy but a lot closer to home.

Your Boyfriend as a Stripper: The Top 5 Standards You Should Have

I've heard enough and I've seen enough in strip clubs, strippers personal lives, and the drama and devastation that exotic dancers can face when they have a boyfriend that is leaching off of them either emotionally or monetarily. You may have a boyfriend that is jealous of what you do, or you may have gone on dates where a guy just can't handle the fact that you are a stripper.

You may even be supporting a boyfriend, letting them live at your apartment or house for free, all while they spend all day playing Wii or having a job that is a low-paying job where they aren't going anywhere but down or staying stagnant in their lives.

Whatever the case may be for you in particular, like if you have fights all of the time with the man in your life, or breaking up and getting back together - whatever - I have been there and I can tell you that it really sucks. It also affects your self esteem and your income in the club.

When you are around people that bring you down in life, that is exactly where YOU will end up, wondering what will become of your life and if your dreams will ever become a reality.

So, after I got rid of the downer men in my life and found a fantastic one, I thought about all of the positive things that he has done for me, my career, and my mental outlook and I want to share these things with you so that you too can find someone that genuinely cares about you more than just your body.

It's time to take out the garbage ladies!

Standard Number One: He must make at least $60,000 per year OR attend college pursuing a degree that will get him somewhere in life whether it be medical school, law school, or business school, etc. You want someone that can support themselves. I'm not saying you have to be a gold digger - that is not what you want to do. BUT - you need to be with a man with an attainable plan, not a philosophy major or something where he will end up waiting tables after he graduates from college. You want someone who is what they call "fiscally responsible" who doesn't spend more than they make or who doesn't have a lot of debt.

Standard Number Two: He must have his OWN place to live. He can have roommates - that is cool, but he must be independent so that there is no mooching going on, and so that you can have time to decide if you even want to live with this person in the future.

Standard Number Three: He must support that you are an exotic dancer and not be jealous. Now, you are going to have to show him that your business is an ethical and professional one, and that you are not a prostitute or cheating on him. That will be his main concern. But seriously, cheating wouldn't go on inside the club anyways if you really wanted to cheat. You will have to reassure him that your profession is mainstream and acceptable - but you shouldn't let him put you on a guilt trip or fight over it. If he doesn't like what you do then he can find someone else. It's that simple.

Standard Number Four: He must be a POSITIVE and GOAL ORIENTED person that wants to go somewhere in life and that wants to help YOU go somewhere in life too. I have dated too many guys that are just downers. They aren't productive, their hobbies are ridiculous, they sit around and watch TV or play Xbox, they don't stimulate their mind by learning new things, going to new places, seeing the world, educating themselves on skills that could make them successful - you get the idea.

Standard Number Five: One strike and they're out. I know this is a terrible topic but I've seen it go on over and over. Anyone who is aggressive towards you, hits you, is a bully towards you, verbally abusive, or tries to manipulate you is out the door immediately!!! These people cannot change who they are and if you see these patterns in someone it is a tell-tale sign that you are in for a terrible relationship. Just think about how this will affect your self esteem and hustling skills at the club! Not to mention ruin your life!

YOUR FEEDBACK IS VERY IMPORTANT TO US - please comment on the blog at www.How-to-Strip.com/ blog with any questions or concerns that you have! Strippers from around the world are bound to chime in on the discussion!

2013 Gentlemen's Club Owners EXPO to Focus on MONEY

Make More. Keep More. Learn How.

"Club owners like me want to know what they can do right now to make more money. How can we make more in profits? What company's product or service will help us do that? That's what we want to see and hear at the EXPO." — quote from EXPO 2012 attendee "MONEY—Make More. Keep More. Learn How," is the theme of the Annual Gentlemen's Club Owners EXPO this coming August 20-22, 2013, at the luxurious Mandalay Bay Resort & Casino in Las Vegas. The 2013 show will mark the 21-Year Anniversary of the multi-billion-dollar adult nightclub industry's only national convention and tradeshow.

"Now that the elections are over and the economy is starting to slowly come back to life, we thought it was time to focus our Annual EXPO on the different ways that club owners can increase revenues, decrease expenses and maximize profits," says Don Waitt, publisher of ED Club Bulletin, the producer of the EXPO. "EXPO 2013 will be about money, plain and simple."

Following the 2012 EXPO, attendees were surveyed and an overwhelming number of respondents said they wanted to hear more seminar discussions on how to make more money and how to save more money. They also wanted more Tradeshow exhibitors at the show to feature the latest products and services that will help them to accomplish those goals of making more and saving more.

The Annual Gentlemen's Club Owners EXPO draws more than 3,000 attendees, including over 1,700 club owners, general managers, and club personnel from individual clubs and club chains. Other EXPO attendees include liquor, beer and wine distributors; food and beverage companies; club furnishings and bar products companies; attorneys, architects, club brokers and insurance specialists; and sound, lighting and staging companies.

EXPO 2013 attendees can count on three days of must-attend workshops and panel sessions geared toward club owners, general managers and other key club personnel; two days of a 300-booth Tradeshow with vendors showcasing their latest products and services; two evening parties that are equal parts networking and enjoyable fun; and the Annual ED Awards Show honoring the industry's top adult nightclubs and entertainers.

For the latest details on EXPO 2013 call ED Publications, Inc. at (727) 726-3592 or log on to www.EDpublications.com

THE HARD SCORE

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

The Super Bowl. Some argue it was the best ever. Those are the same people that argue that there never was a moon landing. Just to qualify for the discussion each team would have to have both their offenses and defenses play the full game, not split halves like San Francisco and Baltimore did.

I'd say SB XIII where the Steelers beat the Cowboys 35-31 was a great game. Or XXV where the Giants beat the Bills in a defensive bruiser 20-19 and only won because a last second field goal attempt by Buffalo missed. How about XLII where the wild card Giants knocked off the almost perfect Patriots 17-14 in a thriller? Then exactly repeated the performance in last year's XLVI 21-17?

Not to say this year's SB didn't have thrilling moments or plays, but that's a far cry from claiming the whole game was worthy of best ever.

Did the Ravens and 49ers each get what they played to? Yeah, if you think Baltimore lost most of the second half and San Francisco won most. But there's 60 minutes to make plays, make mistakes, capitalize, and overcome or fold. By the tale of the clock, the Ravens won.

Did Baltimore dominate the first half and force SF to make mistakes? No, the Niners totally shot themselves in the foot, surprising everyone in the process. Ravens Flacco played a solid game, not stellar, but definitely a good one. The second half flip-flopped, and it was the Ravens what couldn't get it done.

What sealed the 49ers fate? Coaching decisions. Yep, San Fran got outcoached in the last two minutes.

When the clock started again at second and goal, instead of spreading the defense and running the ball, which also would eat the clock, the 49ers chose to pass, which even if successful would have left the Ravens offense too much time. The pass failed and the clock stopped after using only five seconds, saving the Ravens from having to use a timeout.

Then they have to burn another timeout to save them from a delay of game penalty, and stopping the clock. Then another ill-fated passing attempt, which again stopped the clock and Baltimore's not had to use one. Then they turn the ball over with another failed pass, stopping the clock. Baltimore runs three times, clock keeps running, then make the best call of the game, probably for the entire NFL season, they have the punter run around in the end zone instead of punting, taking all but 4 seconds off the clock. That, my friends, is called getting out coached, along with poor game and clock management.

If Jerry Jones and his darling head coach Jason Garrett watched the game, they should have each made notes in capital letters about game and clock management. And whoever on the Ravens side remembered what the punting team could do, they need a huge bonus.

Did Ravens QB Flacco deserve MVP? No. On the offense I'd put Jacoby Jones on top, and on the D I'd have to say linebacker Reed deserved it. Flacco played a solid but not stellar game, whereas Jones and Reed did.

Every good time deserves to include a conspiracy theory and the one rumbling around in the dark corners is that either Saints fans on their own, or with help from the inside, partially sabotaged the lighting to embarrass Commissioner Goodell. Obviously that would be for what they perceive as his destruction of the Saints last season. Not a bad rumor to float. Not true, but fun as all get out for the Saints fans to chew on. And drink on. And eat on. Yeah, NOLA, that's the party place to be.

And here we go for the gamblers in the house. The last four winners of the Super Bowl all visited Philadelphia for the Eagles home opener. Now if you're a Saints fan here's what you do, think the league is in cahoots with Vegas and want to make their deep pocket buddies a gazillion more bucks, and already has the Ravens lined up to win in Philly, so he deep sixes the Saints. I just love conspiracy theories.

The foul that wasn't. While many disagree with whether that was a foul on the 49ers last offensive play or not, here's what the leagues done with late penalties. Over the last five years of post season games (55), the officials have thrown only TWO (2) flags for defensive holding or pass interference in the last two minutes. Yep, you need to reread that a bunch of times.

Tell me that's not some sauce for the conspiracy theorists.

Why would the officials do that? If you want to be sane and logical, and what good normal fan wouldn't, you'd think the league was simply saying to the refs, "unless it's blatant, let them play it out". But other rant-tional fans, oops, that's rational fans, claim you dirty the game if a penalty is a penalty anywhere in the game, and it's not a penalty in the last two minutes.

Do I think there's other evidence that the league has given potential game changing orders to the officials? Yep. When the scrum broke out, Ravens defender Williams shoved an official. He didn't just touch him, or brush against him, he shoved him. That player should've been ejected from the game right then. The rule is, you don't ever touch, bump, breathe on, call their Mamas bad names, or otherwise engage an official.

Regardless that no player has been ejected yet, and yeah, Steelers Harri-son should've for what he did in the Cardinals SB, and nobody wants to take a dream away from a player who's gone through all the work to get there, still, bad conduct has to be accounted for.

So yes, I think the leagues has cautioned and ordered officials to watch what they do in The Big Game. Let the conspiracy theorists rage!

With the fun it's been getting to see two top coaches that are brothers go at it in the Super Bowl, can we even think they'll both do a repeat next year?

Well, if you go by who plays the Eagles in their home opener, then no, because neither team plays Philly for the 2013 season. We know what teams are playing but the dates and schedules won't be released until April.

The Philly phenomena aside, the odds are not good. Why? First of all, regardless that Flacco's gonna get a huge contract increase, probably in the twenty million a year on a one hundred million contract, that team is losing players and they're old, especially on defense. By the way, if Luck can do what he did as a rookie with the Colts, then shouldn't a seasoned QB with a SB win and MVP to his cred be able to take a veteran team back to the big dance? Just sayin' that's something to think about.

Of the two, the Niners have the best chance of getting back. I think they need help in the secondary, a wideout to replace Moss who was useless, but otherwise they have few needs, are more experienced, and have some bad hunger deep. And their coach is seriously hacked off.

Lakers GM Mitch Kupchak said they're not going to trade Dwight Howard or any of the principal players. Either Howards given them private assurances that he'll stay, like he kept giving Orlando, or the Lakers believe they'll sign him out of free agency. That sounds more like Buss Junior talking behind the scenes than anybody with sense would say. Howard may have some top level talent but he's a coach killer and wreaks havoc inside teams. He would like to go to Dallas or New York, and maybe Cuban's crazy enough to try it. Howard loses focus, and he can't shoot from the foul line. Keep him in LA and away from the Mav's.

TD

Two Dogs:
Do you think Jerry Jones will continue to have the biggest voice in free agency and the draft? He hasn't had much luck.

Marla
Duncanville

Marla:
Jerry falls for players like a blind roofer. I understand in this year's draft he's going after some Mediterranean players, like Baklava, Pita, and Hummus, and he's keeping an eye on a big Serb named Cous Cous. He's encouraged by the Mav's success.

TD

Two Dogs:
My husband said Jones likes Garrett because the authority Garrett's been given is spurious. I looked it up and it said it wasn't coming from the true source. So Jones truly is the voice behind Garrett on everything?

Charlotta
Duquesne

Charlotta:

Down here in Tejas, darlin', that's how we read the field.

TD

Two Dogs:
You guys are catfish bait next year. The Redskins will knock Romo out of his socks, tear your haha great team apart, and make Jones beg to switch divisions. Cowboy's fans are dopes, they'd rather be fans of losers than fans of the best teams out there.

Nic
DC

Nic:
Your attitude is short on collateral.

TD

Two Dogs:
It's all about the shoes. Their important. Wrong size can ruin your day. There's some you don't want to be in, like Jerry Jones's. It's about whats in them, like the Cowboys case, like whats in a nose, like Jerry Jones's. And lacing them up can get real tough when your bending over, like Jerry Jones.

Luther
Trenton

Luther:
I bet you showed that to your girlfriend a hundred times just so she'd notice how clever you are.

TD

Two Dogs:
Do you honestly think the 49ers Harbaugh is a top level coach? He acted more like Jason Garrett than a Super Bowl contender.

Crank
Phoenix

Crank:
Yes, I think he's a top level coach. Look, not all things go perfectly and we don't know what was being discussed between coaches in certain situations. But here's how good he really is, he looks ahead and plans for turning the future into reality. For the last two years he'd pick an away game and take the team there for the whole week. Why? Because when you go to the Super Bowl it's a major change in how teams schedule, so he was already thinking of how to minimize that effect on the team and organization. By the way, they also won each game (Bengals and Eagles). That's preparation.

TD

Two Dogs:
Here's what I did for the Super Bowl, I took a large pepperoni pizza, and when it was done I piled tater tots all over it, then poured chili all over that, then added more cheese. It had everything I love on it and it was GREAT.

Mason
Dallas

Mason:
I hope you had big fans in the room, and I'm not talking just about your buddies.

TD

Two Dogs:Can the Mav's and Stars do good this season? Make the playoffs?

Carl
Mesquite

Carl:

It's going to be real tough for both. The Stars are rebuilding after getting the core settled. They're a fourth of the way in with 9 points to the Sharks 15 and the Ducks 13. Unless either, or hopefully both, suffer a major slump, it's bad news. That said, they've been bringing up some good prospects from the AHL. But stacking youth against older, bigger and more experienced lines isn't a recipe for immediate success. The big news is that this has been fun, mostly, and should continue. The Mav's have just edged past the halfway mark and this team is talent short. Write your Congressmen for Cuban NOT to bring Dwight Howard to Dallas, it'll be worse than the Odom experiment.

TD

Two Dogs:
San Fran's receiver Randy Moss says he totally believes he's THE best receiver now and to have ever played the game. Is he ok? I know he's got good stats, maybe Hall stats, but best ever? Is he near target or delusional?

Chuck
Martinsville

Chuck:
He was good when he was good, and that's part of the problem, he chose when he wanted to play. He says he ignores the statistics because he only believes that it's the impact a player makes on the field and that his impact changed games. He's impacted alright, and it's working its way to his brain. Jerry Rice is the bar, and that bar came when passing offenses weren't

JOHNNY CASH POSTAGE STAMP

Let's face it: in an age of online account management, email, Skype, IM, and other methods of near-instant communication and commerce, no one really likes buying postage stamps. So if you have to, you might as well make them as cool as possible. This Johnny Cash Postage Stamp (about $0.50) should certainly qualify. Meant to resemble a 45 rpm record sleeve, the stamp features a black-and-white portrait of Cash taken in 1963 during a Frank Bez photo shoot for Ring of Fire: The Best of Johnny Cash. And it's a Forever stamp, so 20 years from now when stamps cost $10 a piece, you can use it and be all "In yo face!" to the local postmaster.

VINE

It's not exactly video, and not exactly animated GIFs, but Vine ($Free) is certainly interesting. This new Twitter-backed service allows users to record and share looping 6-second videos, complete with audio, comments, and the requisite hashtags. Use it to show friends and followers your daily commute, a particularly spectacular sunset, your playful new kitty, or even your new dildo. We wish we were joking.

Giggle, Grin, Groan

Remember, send your funny jokes to and your bad jokes to wr_maxwell@hotmail.com

Grins, Giggles and Groans disclaimer ; While many of our jokes are submitted by the readers of Metro ANE, some of the obscene words have been changed to protect the fucking innocent. That's right I said the fucking innocent..

A buxom brunette said, "I'm going to take a hot shower. It'll be just a regular shower, but with me in it, it'll be hot !" (from my favorite facebook hooker)

Sage advice ; Never tell a zombie he looks like death warmer over.

Two married buddies are out drinking one night when one turns to the other and says, "You know, I don't know what else to do. Whenever I go home after we've been out drinking, I turn the headlights off before I get to the driveway. I shut off the engine and coast into the garage. I take my shoes off before I go into the house, I sneak up the stairs, I get undressed in the bathroom. I ease into bed and my wife STILL wakes up and yells at me for staying out so late!" His buddy looks at him and says, "Well, you're obviously taking the wrong approach. I screech into the driveway, slam the door, storm up the steps, throw my shoes into the closet, jump into bed, rub my hands on my wife's ass and say, 'How about a blowjob?' ... and she's always sound asleep."

Top 5 Reasons Eve Was Created

1. God was worried that Adam would not be asked "do these jeans make my butt look fat?"
2. God knew that one day Adam would require someone to find the remote.
3. God knew Adam would never go out and buy himself a new fig leaf when his wore out and would need Eve to buy one for him.
4. God knew Adam would never remember which night to take out the garbage.
5. To give Adam something to do in bed when he wasn't sleepy.

BONUS REASON ; When God finished the creation of Adam, He stepped back, scratched his head, and said, "I can do better than that!"

My perverted dictionary defines 'bachelor' as a selfish man who has cheated some good women out of alimony.

The cheating baptist minister and the voluptuous church secretary were coming out of the no-tell motel after a steamy rendezvous when the preacher said "If this leaks out, I'll be ruined." The secretary said, "If it doesn't leak out, I'll be ruined."

A dirty limerick ; Said an over-sexed trollop named Dunn, A freak for triangular fun, "Twin brothers in heat, And a fast double beat, Prove that two heads are better than one."

A medieval princess traveled far from her kingdom, accompanied by a handsome and faithful knight. Their journey was very difficult and they were exhausted, but they were far from the nearest village. They came upon an old maid's cottage deep in the woods and asked the spinster for a place to sleep and reached for her purse. The old maid said, "Your highness, I want no coin and will gladly put you up for the knight."

Did you hear about the aggie who worked at the tampon factory? He thought he was making mattresses for mice.

The chicken farmer had a terrible fire and his chicken coop burned to the ground. Those hens that were not cooked in the fire had all their feathers singed off. To keep the hens warm, the farmer's wife knitted little dresses from the brightly colored scraps of fabric she had laying around the house. After that, the started laying easter eggs.

The old widow had a parrot for many years and one day she got a canary. She kept the two birds in her bedroom where they sang to each other all day long. In the evening, the old lady got undressed to go to bed and the canary said "Peep, peep." where upon the old parrot said, "I've had a good look, and it ain't worth a peep."

The over sexed quarterback thinks that every girl on campus is an eligible pass receiver.

Dennis Hof, owner of the Midnight Bunny Ranch and several other bordellos, is often mistaken as a veterinarian because he owns cat houses all across Nevada.

Our neighbor is a cop and he brings his police dog home with him at night. One night, his police dog had mounted our family dog and we are wondering if that makes her a police woman.

Another dirty limerick ; A couple of lovers on Lake Havasu, Made love in a birch bark canoe, In the middle of a straddle, He inserted the paddle, And she cried, "It feels better than you!"

During the flood caused by hurricane Sandy, the subway system was completely shut down, so many companies hired sleep-in secretaries for their office staffing needs. They didn't do a lot of work done, but no one seemed to mind.

The one phrase an older fellow hates to hear when asking a girl out "I'll have to ask my mother."

A naive girl up in the Arkansas hills married a crafty young fellow. On their wedding night he showed his bride his 'talleywacker' and, after showing her how much fun you can have with a 'talleywacker' he convinced her he was the only man in the world who had one. A few months later, the fellow came home from work and his wife said, "I thought you were the only one with a 'talleywacker', but your brother was here this morning and he has one too." The fellow said, "Well, I used to have 2, but I gave one to my brother." The woman replied "Well, you must be a very generous man, 'cause you gave your brother the bigger one."

My perverted dictionary defines 'morner' as being similar to a nooner, but only sooner.

Two sisters were running their parent's motel one weekend and things were going great. They had rented all the rooms, but then a van pulled in and 6 of the most handsome men they had ever seen walked into the motel lobby. The 6 studs asked it they had any rooms for them. One girl turned to her sister and whispered, "Between you and me, I'm sure we can find an accommodation for all 6 of them." But her sister said, "don't look now, but there are 4 more of them outside." The quick thinking girl said, "well, I guess our hands will be full, too."

The difference between a male flea and a female flea, is the female has a tiny heinie and the male has a teenie weenie.

While many of our jokes are submitted by the readers of Metro ANE, some of the obscene words have been changed to protect the fucking innocent.
